The First 120 Days in the Office

This past month, team members in the Office of Childhood created an at-a-glance report to help promote activities in the first 120 days of the new office.

This new report includes key program data representing every section in the office, including the families, children, and professionals we serve; the communications and professional development we provide; and the relief funding we offer.

Also this past month, we have been identifying big goals and developing project plans for our work this year. In 2021, we talked about some challenges and solutions, and in 2022, we are putting these plans into action and measuring progress. Watch for more information about these big goals and related activities in upcoming newsletters.

I'm grateful for the numerous communications and collaborations with professionals recently that have resulted in innovative ideas and creative solutions. Together, we are creating a stronger childhood system in Missouri and we appreciate the partnership!

Sincerely,
Pam Thomas
Assistant Commissioner, Office of Childhood

The Office of Childhood in collaboration with the University of Missouri-Columbia and The Missouri Chapter, American Academy of Pediatrics created several resources to assist early care and education professionals when administering developmental screenings. The Ages and Stages Questionnaires, BRIGANCE Early Childhood Screens III, and Developmental Indicators for the Assessment of Learning are a few of the recommended tools that should be administered annually or in accordance with each protocol. An updated version of the Developmental Screening Process for Children Birth to Kindergarten Entry flowchart and instructions is also available to explain the steps to take when providing a developmental screening.

Greentree Learning and Childcare Center (GLCC) in Rolla, Missouri serves children from ages 2-12. This non-profit center offers an afterschool and summer care program for children from 5-12, and a child care and preschool for children from 2-5 with a focus on play-based learning and community involvement. At Greentree, they believe that community involvement is integral to a successful program. GLCC staff collaborate with community organizations in the area to strengthen learning opportunities for their diverse student population. Here are some examples of their community collaborations:

GLCC worked with Missouri S&T Aerospace engineers and Mars Rover Team, the United States Geographical Survey agency, local fire and police departments, the Missouri Department of Conservation, the Kaleidoscope Discovery Center, and community leaders to bring their respective expertise areas into the classrooms to inspire students with new learning paths. GLCC works to not only bring the community in through its doors, it also reaches out to the community for input on their programs. The GLCC leadership created a Facebook page for all the child care center directors in the Rolla area to collaborate, brainstorm, and support each other. "We are proud to be a part of our community and hope to continue fostering a love of service and to collaborate with amazing organizations," said Director Rachel Allison.
